as we see it

■ Look closely, all you spiritual descendants of Paul Revere, and you'll see lights burning again these nights in the belfry chamber of Boston's Old North Church. The redcoats are coming. Not by land. Not by sea. They're coming by air. Air—as in television.

Who is ordering us to look at the back of our box of bleach? Who is snipping off the ends of cigarets and instructing us to look at both ends if we want good taste? Who is snitching old bottles of deodorant and replacing them with "new" deodorant? Britishers, that's who.

■ No one was concerned so long as they sent us their old movies and their television Robin Hoods and Admiral Drakes and even their Patricks (McGoohan and Macnee), and that gorgeous Avenger Diana Rigg. Nothing subversive there, we'll warrant. But now they're invading the very heart of the medium, commercials—where all the creative and most of the financial action is.

It's an insidious conditioning process. An English accent—because at heart we're still colonials turning for cultural guidance to the old country—means truth, authority, chic, status. So long as someone says "shedule" as if he means it, so long as "cahn'ts" and "lahfs" roll out easily (and without a trace of Bostonian adenoids), we believe! He can mince our cigarets. He can pilfer our deodorant. He can ridicule our bleach. We love him. We respect him. We obey.

■ As soon as more advertisers see the profit in using British peddlers we'll have nothing else. American announcers will go hungry while American viewers spend half their time listening, enchanted, to Oxford-accented instructions and the other half dashing happily out to stores to buy, buy, buy.

It's a horrible prospect. General Washington—we need you!

Starting today, GE makes it hard to goof up pictures.

General Electric announces the Bluecoat with the Green Dots. A better flashcube for better color snapshots.

THE GREEN DOT. Every GE Bluecoat has four green dots, that act as automatic signal dots to keep track of the flashes for you. When a dot shows green, it means the bulb has not been used. Flash, it turns black. No more guessing. No more missing pictures. Now, you can easily see how many shots you have left.

THE BLUE COAT. Now the cube is blue all over, because we put the color in the cover instead of on each bulb. That's to give you better color snapshots than you ever got before.

Now, picture after picture, the color will be great.

THE BLACK DOT.

When a bulb is flashed, the green dot turns black, showing at a glance the bulb's been used.

No more goof-ups. No more accidentally trying to get five flashes out of a four-flash cube.

NEED A CAT
THAT CAN DO 11 TRICKS ? →

. . . well, first you get a whole bunch of cats that look alike, because each cat has his own bag, and can only do his own thing. In Hollywood, there is a surfeit of trained dogs—canines that can each do all sorts of tricks upon command, and do all of their tricks equally (or almost equally) well, but there are no cats with equal talents. There are “working” cats, but there’s no such thing as multiple trickery for felines; they specialize.

Of course, if a production needs a cat to do any number of tricks, it simply must get hold of any number of cats. And that’s what we have below in various stages of repose—a bunch of cats that (naturally) all look alike but in reality are each individual specialists. Gotten together for a Mission: Impossible script, they all play the same multitasking beast, each being slipped into the action for his little moment of truth when his very own piece of stage business is required to round out the character of the corporate cat. For identification while performing their tricks, they are, clockwise from top left on the preceding pages: Sam, a house cat who gets along famously with mice (it’s really a white rat, but they won’t admit it); Nugent, who climbs things (don’t all cats?); Butch, who is super-adept at licking; Timmy, the bird cat, who frolics implacably with his feathered friends and never so much as takes a bite (they say); Sorry, who fetches things on cue; Pie-O, who simply snarls well; Garcia, who, unlike most cats, will go in the water, although he tends to emerge looking somewhat less dapper than when he dove in; Steve-O, who sits on shoulders best; and Zorro, the aptly yclept jumper. Of the two in the center, the top cat is Red, a catatonic fellow who plays dead most convincingly; Pie-We, an almost equally active performer, is below along with a friend.

As is apparent, the logistics of setting up the illusion of one singularly talented cat from all of these look-alike feline bits and pieces is not easy. Each has to be at his respective place and do his particular act in a reasonable amount of time—a thing that cats are sometimes loath to do, being naturally blasé and not at all impressed by the lures of show-biz fame the way dogs and dolphins and man-made monsters are. And to compound the difficulty, the cats fight with each other. That’s why some of the below are in cages. If they weren’t, the picture would probably just show a lot of fur and blood and stuff. Not what we’d want at all.

HOW TELEVISION IS WAGING A SUMMER CAMPAIGN FOR RACIAL UNDERSTANDING

By Richard K. Doan

If Americans by the millions wind up this summer feeling that, next to politics, the topic they've been deluged with on television is black-vs.-white attitudes, that will be just fine with a lot of TV people—black and white.

It's exactly what they've hoped for: to make as many people as possible painfully aware of deep-seated racial biases—and maybe grimly determined to outgrow them.

By next month's end, at least 17½ hours—most of them in prime time—will have been devoted by three networks to a concentrated TV campaign to root out U.S. racism. ABC's Time for Americans, CBS's Of Black America and NET's Black Journal may, of course, add up to a drop in the bucket as far as the massive job of unprejudicing a whole nation is concerned. Yet, who's to say that the impact of such a TV effort, measurable though it might not be, must be inconsequential?

If TV has helped promote a climate of violence, as some critics claim, is it not equally capable of helping to cool a long, hot summer?

As this is written, it is too early to know how much and how well these TV programs got through to the people they needed to reach. The unpredictability of events in these days of joltingly unexpected developments rules out comfortable expectations. But causes and motives can be examined.

What went into these TV undertakings, in the way of hopes and aims?

A strikingly common note was sounded by the individuals prominently involved: They liked to think that white America might come away acutely conscious of prejudices it wasn't aware of, and that black America might be helped in its search for identity by being shown the heritage it might not have been aware of. →

The motivating idea was phrased in many ways:

CBS News president Richard S. Salant: "My own test is whether I can sleep a little better nights because we [whites at CBS] tried to do something. I want our series to penetrate the thinking of whites who haven't really paid much attention to the problem. And I want the Negro community to be able to turn its TV sets on seven times and see something that tells them the White Establishment cares."

Stephen Fleischman, co-executive producer of ABC's series: "We've got first to shock people, white people, into watching. Then we've got to show them latent racism with which they can identify, and make them realize they've got these attitudes."

Lou Potter, Negro editor of the NET programs: "I'm a big believer in one of the keys to the problem being respect. I think our Black Journal can make a strong contribution by stressing dignity for the Negro. Secondly, I hope it will blaze a trail for networks and local stations—especially local stations—to do more programming for and about the black community."

Wardell Gaynor, Negro associate producer of the CBS project: "My friends express a lot of cynicism. They don't think these programs can say much, really. I hope we will end up saying something, something that might make them sit up and say, 'Hey, that was all right!'"

Don Dixon, NET vice president of public affairs: "We want to give whites a view of Negro life they don't see on TV. We see the Negro as a maid in a situation comedy or as a rioter in the news. But we don't see him as he really is most of the time. As for the Negroes, we want to show them the world they are part of, a world they don't see much of on TV."

Perry Wolff, executive producer of the CBS series: "We've got to change some attitudes. The people we've got most to move are the lower middle-class whites. We've got to show them that the Negroes aren't a monolithic slab, all alike, any more than whites are all alike. We've shown too much of the Saturday-night Negro; we've got to show the Monday-morning Negro, the Tuesday Negro."

Might all this concentration on exposing biases do much to cool summer racial tensions? People involved doubted it but agreed with Wolff's sentiments: "I just don't want to be fiddling when Chicago burns."

The networks were mostly "fiddling," however, it has to be noted, prior to this rash of concern over boiling tensions. They had aired an occasional documentary, to be sure, but hadn't turned on a massive push. What, then, triggered it?

"Panic," replied ABC's Fleischman in candor. "Just plain panic." Others preferred, though, to trace it to the Kerner Commission inquiry into civil disorders and its disquieting indictment of "white racism." Salant and his ABC News counterpart, Elmer Lower, say a three-day brainstorming session with the Kerner group last November touched off planning of these series. The final push to "do something" this summer to help ease white-vs.-black strains came, however, from the White House via Vice President Humphrey. He invited the top brass of the three commercial networks to Washington to urge them to help out. Humphrey staffers visited NET president John F. White to enlist his aid.

NBC, alone among the networks, made no plans to contribute in any special way to the summer cool-it campaign. NBC spokesmen said their contribution would come in an "urban crisis" series of four specials, the first in September, the second late in December, the last two next year.

ABC blocked out six editions of its Time for Americans, the last booked for July 29. CBS's seven Of Black America specials, all in prime time, were to be spread from July 2 through Sept. 2. NET's monthly Black Journal, started in June, was to conclude in September unless underwriting was found to continue the series.

What did Negroes taking leading on-camera roles in these bias-busting efforts think of them?

Bill Greaves of Black Journal: "It's unfortunate this sort of program should have to come to pass, but we have been the victim of white journals. If we can't have black-and-white journals, then we'll have to have black journals until this country matures, and particularly until the media people mature. . . . You bet your sweet life I agree with the Kerner report. The black man has been kept out of the mainstream of American life, and the white community has got to get on its bicycle and try to reverse this. One thing these programs may do is generate enough interest by the white community in the black man's concerns to help restrain those white morons who are throwing fuel on the black community."

George Foster, CBS correspondent: "My concern is that it's possible to do a show like this without it being relevant, without it making a difference. I feel people are honestly tired of the racial strife and they're looking for answers. I hope to some degree that our programs will at least aim people in the direction of answers. Television has been far too noncommittal. I think people have had enough of this. They want strong statements. I must say I admire George Wallace in a way because he's making a strong statement for his side. We've got to make strong statements for our side, too."

THIRD DOWN, TWO TO GO - AND NOW WHAT?

Frank Gifford will tell you, and for a lot more money than he ever dreamed he'd get out of football

By Stanley Frank

You prepare for an interview with Frank Gifford by documenting dramatic highlights from the career of pro football's former glamor boy. To give the story pertinence and punch, you devise trenchant questions exploring his transition from the arena to the broadcasting booth, where he now is CBS's ranking guru, and what happens? You wind up making sympathetic noises while Gifford laments his thwarted acting ambitions, which might have brought him one-twentieth of his present income.

"I was more serious about acting than anything I've ever done in my life, and I worked hard at it for five years," he confides. "Football opened a lot of doors for me in Hollywood and TV. I was cast as the lead in two TV pilots and played bit parts in a dozen movies, but I blew my chances. I didn't have the talent to capitalize on them. It's still my biggest disappointment."

The announcement was suppressed

at the time, but Gifford was hooked so badly on acting that he actually quit football in the spring of 1958, one season after he had been voted the most valuable player in the NFL for leading the New York Giants to the championship.

"The Giants laughed off my decision as though it was a kooky kid's brain storm, but I was utterly sincere," Gifford relates. "After I won the MVP, the Warner studio gave me a seven-year contract and put me in 'Darby's Rangers,' a movie about a World War II commando outfit. I was just a talking stuntman in the picture, but someone thought I was promising enough to play the leading role of a Federal agent fighting racketeers in Public Enemy, a TV series.

"Since the show would go into production as soon as the pilot was sold, I told the Giants I was giving up football. The day the team went to training camp, I was in San Diego making 'Up Periscope,' another war movie. A week later a friend who worked in an ad agency phoned me. 'I've just seen your pilot and it's a dog,' he said. 'You'd better get back with the team.' Two days later I was taking my lumps in scrimmage.

"The next year CBS gave me another shot in Turnpike, a TV series. I played an undercover state trooper and that died miserably too." He smiles ruefully. "I was an awful bust as an actor, but I sure was eager."

It is intriguing to speculate whether Gifford could have made his retirement stick if he had become a folk hero of videoland foiling hoods. He was making $25,000 a year with the Giants—top money then—but the lush rewards from a popular show might have squelched his incentive to suffer the punishment of football. There is good reason to suspect, however, that he would have been unable to resist the call of the wild. In 1962 he risked something far more precious than mere money when he returned to the snake pit after an absence of a year.

The incident that almost wrecked him triggered ugly accusations of dirty pool. In 1960 the Giants were trailing the Philadelphia Eagles, 17-10, in the crucial game for the Eastern title when Gifford caught a pass on the opposing 35-yard line and was hit by Chuck Bednarik. The impact jolted the ball loose and the Eagles recovered the fumble. Gifford was knocked unconscious. Bednarik stood over him and shook his fist exultantly.

Gifford was carried off with a brain concussion. The Giants first charged that the Eagles deliberately "got" Gifford and pointed to Bednarik's gesture as proof of it. Bednarik insisted he simply had reacted with exuberance to the fact that a vital Giant drive had ended. Bednarik's contention was generally agreed to be correct.

After a two-week siege in the hospital, Gifford was told another head injury might disable him permanently.

He sat out the '61 season, but the following year he stunned everyone by getting back into uniform at the advanced age of 32. More astonishingly, he sparked the Giants to two straight division titles. He finally retired for good in 1965 after 12 seasons.

Gifford's return in '62 jeopardized more than his health. He had a daily radio sports program on CBS and a TV show before Giant games. The network obviously was grooming him to be the anchor man of its football staff, but his audience appeal could have been ruined had his comeback been a flop. The strangest part of the whole thing is that Gifford's comments often intimate that a bloke must be out of his mind to knock heads with football's monsters.

He seemed disturbed by the observation. "Gosh, I don't mean to imply that," he said. "I remark on the size of the players to underscore their great speed and athletic skills. I usually was the smallest man on the field at 190 pounds, but I couldn't turn the corner on an end sweep against a defensive lineman like Big Daddy Lipscomb, who was 100 pounds heavier than me and just as fast.

"What I'm really trying to project is the tremendous pride and competitiveness of the players. I still remember what Y.A. Tittle said before the kickoff of our last game in 1964.

"It had been a horrible season for all of us. The team won only two games and veterans like Y.A. and me had been eaten alive by younger guys. Both of us knew we had reached the end of the line. Y.A. looked around the packed stadium and said, 'Tough as this is, it's an experience I wouldn't have missed for anything.' He meant the esprit de corps, the intensity of working for one objective, the exhilaration of winning a big game."

Gifford may never have made a first down emoting before the camera, but his impact on TV reporting has been substantial. The gee-whiz, hys- → terical school of sports announcing was passing before he arrived on the scene, but he probably gave it the strongest shove. His low-key, urbane commentary on the action is, he admits, a studied technique to set off the violence seen on the tube.

"A reporter who gets caught up in the excitement is bound to miss details he should give viewers. Besides, the contrast between the muted sounds in the booth and the wild noises heard on the field was my most vivid impression when I made the switch. I had the same reaction when I went from college to the pros. In college, you hear dull thuds when the players block and tackle. They hit so much harder in the pros it's like the crack of a rifle. The yelling of the players and coaches is so loud it seems to come from everywhere. It scared the hell out of me as a rookie."

Another Gifford specialty is more difficult to imitate. All announcers try to anticipate the next play, which is no great trick on third down and long yardage. Everyone in the ball park knows a pass is coming, but Gifford has an uncanny faculty for predicting the receiver and the precise pattern he will run.

"It's not as tough as it appears," he says. "After all, I played against all the coaches and veteran quarterbacks. Every team has a distinct personality that stems from the coach's concept of the game and the quarterback's temperament. You'd be surprised how often a team uses the identical play in a certain situation. These frequencies, as they're called, pop up constantly because they exploit what each team does best."

He obligingly went through the "book" on the NFL's top teams. "The Packers rarely spring a fancy innovation. Phil Bengtson, like his predecessor Vince Lombardi, is hipped on fundamentals and hammers away at an opponent's weakness until he kills him. The Browns are basically a running team and use the pass to keep the defense honest. The Colts, for all their flashy stuff, stress defense. Tom Landry may be the best coach in the business in that department. The Rams' game also is built around their defense. I made my reputation as an offensive player, but I broke in on the defense and I firmly believe that's where championship teams are made."

The ability to call a team's shots in advance is based on a good deal more than firsthand knowledge of its personnel, who shortly will pass from the picture. The day before a game, Gifford watches a visiting team in practice, mingles with the squad afterward to appraise its psychological "set," and studies movies of its previous games. Before the first Super Bowl in 1967 Gifford looked at movies of the Kansas City Chiefs, whom he never had seen, for some 20 hours to become familiar with their style.

Gifford wears so many hats at CBS a 12-hour day is routine for him, but shed not a tear for the poor working stiff. An agent who knows the going rates for various activities furnished the following breakdown on Gifford's weekly or per-show fees: sports director of WCBS-TV, $200; a nightly TV sports roundup in New York, $300; 15-minute daily show on CBS radio network, $750; pre-game Giant show, $500; game commentary, $900; network game, $1000.

That adds up to about $110,000 a year, and personal appearances and producing an occasional documentary bring in at least $25,000 more. In addition he does commercials for Westinghouse which bring in a minimum of $40,000 a year. If Gifford had achieved his heart's desire and become an actor, he might have earned about $5000 a year—with luck. To paraphrase Mr. Harry Golden, this is a great little country we've got here in America. END

TV Faces Trouble at Chicago

Are President Johnson and Chicago's Mayor Daley really trying to ward off TV coverage of possible anti-Administration unpleasanties which may erupt outside the International Amphitheater during the Democratic Convention that opens Aug. 26?

Many a TV newsman apparently believes so. David Brinkley as much as said so on the air one night during a lull in the GOP Convention at Miami Beach. Up and down the sweltering Florida sandspit, network correspondents working outside the convention hall were able to provide live coverage of activities, even if they couldn't get past hotel doors behind which delegates debated commitments. But in Chicago it appeared—"by design or accident," as Brinkley put it—that the networks might sometimes be denied even a dime phone call from their man at the various headquarters—or on a street where anti-war forces are expected to demonstrate.

The implication frequently heard in TV quarters was that the White House and Chicago's powerful mayor, if they really wanted to, could bring off settlement of a dragged-out labor dispute in which electrical workers had prevented the networks from wiring up such spots as O'Hare Airport, key hotels and rooftops. "It looks," NBC News veepee Don Meaney grouched last week, "as though we'll just have to film or tape things we'd normally pick up live." That will mean up to two or three hours' delay getting reports on the air.

CBS News veepee Bill Leonard refused "to rule out live coverage" outside the Amphitheater, saying he felt the union hang-up still might be resolved in time to set up remotes. He also declined to "go for the conspiracy theory" of what was behind the trouble.

At ABC, convention producer Wally Pfister Jr. was less concerned about live pickups, having only a 90-minute nightly wrap-up to worry about. "Our big problem is just plain old phones," he said. "We hear even the pay phones in Chicago are jammed with uncollected coins and out of order in many places. We might have trouble getting any kind of word from our people on the street."

Johnny Carson and Joey Bishop both vowed they felt competition was healthy. They might as well, since a three-way horse race is in the cards: CBS, with its outlets fast running out of old movies, at last is joining the late-night fray. Starting a year from now, Merv Griffin, already an old hand at the song-and-patter business, will do a nightly 90-minute show for CBS essentially like the one he hosts currently on the Group W syndication circuit for 140-odd stations. How well Merv will fare will depend in part on what Carson does. ABC and CBS officials, possibly inspired by wishful thinking, insist they hear rumblings that Carson may quit as early as next January. Johnny's bosses scoff at such talk. "Not before 1970 at the very earliest," an NBC man promised.

CLUE TO DIVORCE RATE

It is easy to see why the divorce rate in America is so high after viewing The Newlywed Game program. I have never seen so many immature, selfish, spoiled-brat young people in such public display of bad manners, embarrassment, ridicule, angry remarks and pouting little girls packed into one week of viewing. Any young men and women who would jeopardize their married life by participating in such a program must have rocks in their heads. The ridicule one would receive from the questions asked on such a program certainly can't be worth the chance of winning a prize!

THE JOY OF JOEY

Re your July 27 Cover, I can't take my eyes off Joey Heatherton. What personality, what legs! What charm, what legs! What magnetism, what legs!

SYMPATHY

Having watched the recent Julie London special, I do hope she's feeling better.

HOPEFUL THERAPIST

In his article on Kaye Ballard ["She Lives from One Trauma to Another," July 20] Arnold Hano indicates that when Kaye was a child she went to a speech therapist who listened to her "lisp" of one word, and said her condition was hopeless. A speech therapist never makes an evaluation on the utterance of one word. And unless there is a gross physical or mental disorder (and seldom even then) a speech therapist never indicates that a case is hopeless.

Annell McGee, Speech Pathologist

New Orleans

ATTENTION, NIELSEN

Re your July 27 article "Who Watches What?" I have a cat that watches TV. His favorite programs are Baseball's Game of the Week, The Ed Sullivan Show, Captain Kangaroo and Summer Brothers Smothers Show.

SPACE LINGUISTS

One thing I have learned from watching Lost in Space and Star Trek is that the inhabitants of many other planets speak very fluent English.

DISAPPOINTMENTS

Here you go again telling us of the great things TV land is bringing us this fall. You're like sin; you promise more than you deliver.

H. D. Brown
Carmel, Cal.

It is simply false advertising when a station pretends to present a movie but really presents a cut version.

A couple of goodies have cropped up to relieve the dog-day doldrums that beset the network-movie reruns in mid-August, with Cecil B. DeMille's circus epic and Marilyn Monroe's best vehicle on hand for our enjoyment.

"The Greatest Show on Earth," made in 1952, still stands as the circus spectacular of them all, with a cast of thousands and the wonderful sawdust world of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey organization sprawled out for our edification. The plot, as if one were needed amid all the real-life activity DeMille has put under the big top for us, involves two rival aerialists, played knowingly by Betty Hutton and Cornel Wilde, and Charlton Heston as a hard-bitten manager with a weakness for the lady and a conviction that the show must go on. There's a train wreck for melodrama and, for clowning, not only the one and only Emmett Kelly but also James Stewart—and see if you can spot him behind the makeup he keeps on for the duration.

"Bus Stop," the William Inge play brought to the screen in 1956, provided not only the blueprint for a television series but also probably the best role for Marilyn Monroe. As the night-club singer, the frightened kid from the Ozarks with ambitions to be a "chantoosie," who is courted by a naive cowboy, Miss Monroe is at her funniest and her most heart-touching. Don Murray, then a newcomer to the screen, is very good as the cowboy who handles a girl like a steer until he learns better and there's a fine supporting cast on hand to give the movie its particular appeal as one that treads the fine line between anguish and laughter and carries a bit of both throughout.

Sincerity is the hallmark of "No Man Is an Island," a true-life story that is not quite as pretentious as its title suggests. It is a modest low-keyed account of the U.S. Navy radioman who managed, with the aid of the people of Guam, to stay out of the hands of the Japanese for 34 months while they occupied the island during World War II.

Pretension, however, is the keynote for "Something Wild," a gloomy mishmash of melodramatic nonsense that would be funny if it didn't involve so many misused talents. Some striking photography, an Aaron Copland score and Mildred Dunnock are lost in a maze involving Carroll Baker as a rape victim who is ultimately rescued by Ralph Meeker who seems to be a psychopath but is actually your friendly neighborhood good guy. It's all more woolly than wild—fuzzy woolly, that is.

For comedy per se, there are the talents of Paula Prentiss and Jim Hutton—talents wasted in "The Horizontal Lieutenant," and for sudsy sorrow there's "Stolen Hours" to remind us of how much better "Dark Victory" did by our tear ducts.

IS NAZISM DEAD IN GERMANY?

IN 1945... THE CITIES OF GERMANY lay prostrate — a landscape of rubble and ruin. World leaders said it would take 50 years for Germany to rebuild — if ever! In those days "The WORLD TOMORROW" was predicting Germany would rise to a position of great power over a union of nations inside Europe which could become a virtual Frankenstein monster.

Today — as Britain gets weaker, Germany gets stronger and uneasier — we see riots in Berlin, demonstrations, new militarism and a neo-Nazi party scoring frightening success in recent elections. These events inside Germany are destined to drastically alter the future course of your life!

Get the whole story in an absorbing, startling, new book that dares to look into the future!

This full-color, dramatically illustrated, 240-page book contains the logical, positive outcome of the gathering storm in Europe. Send now for your vital, eye-opening, FREE copy.

The new comedy team plunges into rehearsals under the direction of their respective agents—Mooney (for Lucy) and, for George, miserly Jack Benny. ## We can read Dr. Seuss all by ourselves!

You'll know something special is happening the moment your child first turns, wide-eyed, from the lovable DR. SEUSS creatures and their antics to the words that tell about them. Word by word, phrase by phrase, he follows the print... excitement grows until the secret can't be kept a moment longer and he shouts his joyous discovery: “I can read it myself!”

A whole parade of sunny, funny books in words young children know or can easily learn!

For millions of children, love of reading has started with membership in the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM—a proven program of reading enrichment, tested and approved by teachers, and loved by parents, teachers and tots alike. The country's largest reading program for children, it is the only one that offers BEGINNER BOOKS by DR. SEUSS and other gifted writers and artists.

Belonging to the program is a joy for boys and girls. For BEGINNER BOOKS tell fascinating tales about such fabulous creatures as a firefly who can write in the sky... a lovable animal who can take off his polka dots and put them on people... a cat who wears a hat and can balance umbrellas, fishbowls and layer cakes on his paws!

But the importance of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM goes far beyond the delightful stories and glorious illustrations. For at the same time that it makes reading fun for your child, this planned program subtly helps your child “stretch” his reading and learning abilities.

Each BEGINNER BOOK rewards your child for reading with its humor and excitement... reinforces his desire to read because it makes reading easier... reassures him with a successful reading experience.

The time to bring the program into your child's life is now, during the critical learning years from 4 to 8. The books are just right for children who are beginning to read; they're perfect, too, for reading aloud to preschoolers, who become even more eager to read on their own.

ILY CIRCLE magazine about BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM. “Children enjoy books that make them laugh...we both chuckled our way through (Dr. Seuss') rollicking rhymes. Occasionally, without formal effort on my part, Robert learned to recognize the words in the simple stories, and by the time he was three years old, he was a beginning reader.”

BEGINNER BOOKS are durably designed to live with a small child. They're printed on heavy paper in large, bold letters at least three bright colors and large readable type. As a member of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM, your child will receive a BEGINNER BOOK every month. You will be billed only $1.65 plus a small reading charge, instead of the publisher's catalog price of $1.95. After four monthly selections, you may cancel membership at any time.

Let DR. SEUSS and his friends delight your child for 10 days FREE!

We invite you to prove the benefits of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM by accepting the three books shown here—a $3.95 value at the publisher's catalog price—for $1.65. Even this small investment in your child's reading and school progress carries no financial risk. Ten days' FREE trial will convince you the program will stimulate your child's appetite for reading, or you may return the three introductory books and nothing. Fill out and mail the attached reply card at right, to

Producer Arthur Rabin: "We attempted to confront the question of differences and similarities between American Negroes and Africans."

SPECIAL COLOR Early this year, a group of young American Negroes spent four weeks visiting Ghana and exploring their African heritage. Cameras followed, focusing on three teen-agers from Washington, D.C.—recording the reactions of these bright and inquisitive students to their first-hand encounters with African culture.

Films show what the group saw and how it participated; the youth themselves describe their reactions to . . . learning and joining in tribal dances; witnessing a festive funeral ceremony (celebrated weeks after the actual burial); visiting the marketplaces; sampling native foods; touring Cape Castle, a fort where slaves were held before being sent to America; meeting African students; and one youth's becoming an honorary tribal chief.

The students also discuss African family life, moral values, personal relationships, the increasing Westernization of Africa, and the degree of racial identity they found in Ghana. (60 min.)

Miss Monroe poignantly sings "That Old Black Magic" badly, on purpose. Don Murray, in his movie debut, won an Oscar nomination. Movie and stage director Joshua Logan ("Mr. Roberts") filmed the story from a screenplay by George Axelrod. (Rerun)

6 9 NET FESTIVAL—Dance

Medieval settings and verse blend with contemporary music and dance in this production of Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana." Ballet master John Butler choreographed the dance, performed by the Netherland Dance Theater in a medieval castle near Doornenburg, Holland. Leopold Stokowski directs the Houston Symphony Orchestra and Chorale. Orff chose for this work 25 poems from a collection of verse attributed to 13th-century troubadours. Orff's music, although it often uses chant-like melodies, reflects the poetry's lack of solemn and churchly formality. (Rerun; 60 min.)

9 NET FESTIVAL—Music

Scheduled: "Eroica," a look at Beethoven's music and the era in which it was written. Liberal and original, democratic and rebellious, Beethoven (1770-1827) freed music from the bonds of convention. You might have hot flashes and chilly spells, and feel all out of kilter. It's not nice to feel you're not the woman you used to be. It can be a little frightening. And it isn't any wonder that your feelings get jumbled up.

Well, we have something for the day you need a little comforting. Lydia E. Pinkham Tablets. They're made with gentle, natural ingredients that work to give you a better sense of well-being. A sense of well-being that you might lose when you start changing. And you don't run any chance of the kind of unpleasant side effects you could get from some of the newer drugs.

With an old-fashioned problem like this, couldn't you use an old-fashioned medicine?

UP WITH PEOPLE

SPECIAL COLOR The news media doesn't usually pick up on this aspect of American youth, but here are 150 young people unabashedly belting out a musical sermon on what they believe America is all about: love, unselfishness, honesty and purity.

Bob Hope introduces the group, saluting them for their world-wide efforts for peace and goodwill. Non-professionals all, they receive no pay for their singing, but have managed to carry their message across the Nation many times over and to a couple of other continents to boot.

They write their own songs and the titles tell the story: "Up with People," "Sing Out,"

"Gee, I'm Looking Forward to the Future," "The World's Your Home Town," "Man's Gotta Go Somewhere," "Don't Stand Still," "Freedom Isn't Free," "There Is Something Going" and "Which Way America?"

They are seen holding forth with their own brand of diplomacy in New York City—Madison Square Garden, Washington Square Park (in the heart of Greenwich Village) and in the streets of East Harlem. They are also viewed at Fairleigh Dickinson University in New Jersey and at their festival workshop meetings at Fort Slocum, N.Y.

LOOK WHAT'S HAPPENED TO THESE DODGE CITY CITIZENS

(Since they started hanging around Miss Kitty's saloon)

By Leslie Raddatz

Back in 1957, when Gunsmoke was just two successful years old, big Jim Arness—Marshal Matt Dillon—told a reporter, "I'll have to start thinking of other roles for the future or else I'll be a dead duck."

Four years later, he told another reporter, "If Gunsmoke goes 10 more years, I'll be happy—I'll swim with the tide, however it goes."

Today, as Gunsmoke is 12-going-on-13 and high in the Nielsen ratings, big Jim won't even talk to the press. In fact, he has said that if he so much as sees anyone from the CBS Press Information Department on the set, he will immediately leave and stay in his dressing room until the offending publicist is gone.

The past decade-plus has brought changes to all the Gunsmoke regulars—Amanda Blake, who plays Kitty Russell; Milburn Stone, who plays Doc Adams; Ken Curtis, a comparatively recent arrival, now in his fifth season as Festus Haggen; and a departed veteran of the program, Dennis Weaver, the ex-Chester Good, who finds himself in Gentle Ben playing second fiddle to an 8-foot bear instead of the 6-foot-6 Arness.

But probably nobody in the cast has changed as much as big Jim himself. In an article in Ebony magazine, his former wife, Virginia, operating an integrated motel in a racially mixed community near San Bernardino, Cal., referred to him as "a young beachcomber" she had married 20 years before. By the time Gunsmoke came along, he had prevailed upon an agent named Leon Lance to take him on—and immediately afterward borrowed $10 from Mr. Lance. He played minor roles in a number of movies and the title role in a science-fiction thriller called "The Thing," of which he said, "I didn't have any speaking lines, but it sure brought me a lot of publicity."

Then came Gunsmoke. Not long after Leon Lance made the deal for Arness to star in the series, big Jim dispensed with his services. But the first few years were happy. Reporters who interviewed him in those days wrote things like, "In person, Jim is far more affable than the strong, silent Dillon he portrays on the TV screen," and, "Harassments fail to expose any big-star complex in Arness. "Even Dennis Weaver allowed as how "success hasn't changed him hardly at all." Jim himself said, "This is a good life. I don't make enough to launch corporations and business enterprises, but at least I'm supporting my family."

Soon, though, he was saying, "What burns me up is that I'm not making the kind of money I should be making." It was not long before he formed his own production company and persuaded CBS — by threatening to quit the program—to let his company have a piece of the Gunsmoke action. Later, when it became advantageous for income tax purposes, Arness persuaded CBS to buy his production company from him.

Today he has a variety of profitable investments, a ranch at Malibu and a home in Hawaii. He is a dedicated surfer and skier who never makes the Hollywood scene. According to someone who knows him, "He has a small coterie of friends. He wouldn't be caught dead at a night club, but he's no recluse." The same person feels that once Gunsmoke is over—if it ever is—rather than look for those "other roles for the future," Arness would "probably like to take his 52-foot catamaran to the Islands or the South Seas."

Those who know him become confused in trying to explain his standoffishness. Comments run all the way from, "He has never said, 'Look at me—I'm big and important,'" to, "He's a very strange boy," "Some of it—believe it or not—is shyness,"

"After knowing him for 10 years,

I still don't know him," and,

"There's not much emotion in him. When that little bit of openness closes up, it really closes."

Openness is more typical of the other Gunsmoke regulars.

When asked what changes the series has wrought in her life, Amanda Blake exclaims,

"I've had three husbands!"

She has indeed, plus a fourth—or first—before Gunsmoke began.

Professionally, she had been under contract to MGM, where she was kept waiting in the wings in case Greer Garson got out of line, and after that she was briefly under contract to Columbia Pictures, where her career was also undistinguished. Mostly, she admits today, "I just scratched around, trying to pay the rent." She was doing television at CBS when she heard that Gunsmoke was being readied for TV. "I was in on the ground floor," she says. "They had to give me the part of Kitty—I drove everybody nuts until they did."

She has been married since June 1967 to Frank H. Gilbert, president and chairman of the board of the →

Gilbert Pump and Equipment Co. in Phoenix, Ariz. She makes as many as three flying trips a week between there and Los Angeles to do Gunsmoke. Her husband—she is his fourth wife—has eight children, the three youngest of whom, teen-age boys, including a set of twins, live at home. Says Amanda, who is childless, "Believe me, that's a new experience for me." She still maintains her home in the San Fernando Valley, west of Hollywood, but usually stays with friends who live nearer the studio. At home in Phoenix—a large old Spanish-style house on four acres of land—she has become interested in, of all things, raising fancy chickens. She says, "I'm absolutely fascinated by those birds," which she plans to exhibit at the next county fair. She adds, "I've been doing so many things I never did before, like deep-sea fishing. I caught my first marlin." She also spends considerable time at her husband's country club and having lunch with other Phoenix matrons, who have learned to accept her as Mrs. Gilbert rather than Amanda Blake, the television star.

Like most of the Gunsmoke cast, Amanda has substantial investments in bowling alleys and other income-producing properties. She and the other regulars sold their residual rights in the series to CBS a few years ago at a figure which was reputed to have made them all millionaires. But a network executive says, "Don't believe all that actors tell you," and Amanda admits now, "We should have waited a few more years."

Milburn Stone waited a long time for his big break as Doc Adams in Gunsmoke. "I've been a working actor all my life," he says, going back to circuses and tent shows. A veteran—"not illustriously"—of some 250 motion pictures, he had done no television before Gunsmoke, but he says, "They weren't exactly pushing me."

When he tried out for the part of Doc, he promptly remolded the character into the lovable, crotchety old party TV viewers know. (When Doc was first brought into the original "Gunsmoke" radio show, he was a rather unpleasant character—sur-named Adams in honor of Charles Addams, whose New Yorker cartoon characters were reminiscent of Doc's early personality.)

One of the first things Stone did after Gunsmoke became a hit was buy a boat. A native of the dry lands of Kansas, he says, "I've always loved boats and the water." He has had two boats since and presently owns a 41-footer which sleeps eight and tows a 17-foot fishing boat on Lake Mead, near Las Vegas, Nev. "I go up there every time I can put four days together," he says. Recently, when Gunsmoke kept him away from the boat for five weeks, he said, "I'm going nuts." Stone lives on an acre and a half in the hills above the San Fernando Valley with his wife of 28 years. (His first wife died in 1939, leaving him with an 11-year-old daughter, who has since made him a grandfather four times over.)

He has extremely definite ideas on what is right for Gunsmoke and for Doc in particular, suggesting changes in dialog when he feels they are necessary. Once he absolutely refused to appear in a scene which he felt was out of character and, when pressure was brought to bear by the producer, said, "I'm too old to scare and too rich to care." Now, sitting at the roll-top desk in his dressing room, which is decorated in the manner of Doc's office in Gunsmoke, he says, "This is a pretty good way to end a guy's career—not that I have any intention of retiring." In fact, he has an idea for a television series starring himself and Ken Curtis ready to roll, if and when Gunsmoke goes off.

Ken Curtis, the newest member of the Gunsmoke cast, probably makes as much money playing fairs and rodeos as he does in the series—"six figures," he says. Sometimes he and Milburn Stone work together, but usually Ken appears alone, opening his act as Festus Haggen, then suddenly starting to sing in the fine voice which years ago made him a vocalist with Tommy Dorsey and with the Sons of the Pioneers.

Curtis's first television appearance was in Have Gun—Will Travel, in two episodes of which he played a character called Monk, who was not unlike Festus. The writer of those episodes, Les Crutchfield, later wrote Festus into a Gunsmoke script, and when Dennis Weaver left the cast, Festus moved in. Previously, Curtis had appeared in some 60 motion pictures, mostly as a singing cowboy; and since he was married to John Ford's daughter, Barbara, at the time, he could also usually count on roles in Ford movies. Before Gunsmoke, he spent two years in a syndicated TV series called Ripcord. During his second season on Gunsmoke, he and his wife were divorced, and he has since married Torrie Connelly, for many years secretary of the Rodeo Cowboys' Association. They live in a ranch-type home on a hillside in the San Fernando Valley with Mrs. Curtis's two children by a former marriage.

Although, after all these years of working together the Gunsmoke cast are good friends, Curtis and his family and Milburn Stone and his wife are the only ones who get together socially. Amanda Blake has her new life and friends in Phoenix; and Jim Arness, as noted, prefers to go his own way, whether it be surfing or skiing.

Of all the Gunsmoke regulars, Ken Curtis is most outspokenly grateful for the recognition the program has brought him, but, as Amanda Blake says, "Let's face it—this show has made us all."

That it has.

A gardening show blooms on educational television

By Angela Becker

The authenticated story has it that when Queen Victoria was on her deathbed, the last thing that made her laugh was the announcement of the engagement of a Miss Robinson and a Mr. Cruso.

Thalassa Cruso, born of that union, is spreading her own brand of jolly green humor twice a week on her Making Things Grow plant show, produced at Boston's WGBH-TV and seen throughout New England.

The army of Thalassa-watchers includes college girls, young marrieds, men ("I don't know why they watch. For laughs, probably"), secretaries, a lot of English people and an undetermined number of little old ladies.

Miss Cruso, herself a hybrid of Julia Child and Katharine Hepburn, is a thin, authoritative British grandmother with a throaty voice, brown bangs and a bun on top of her head, who dispenses advice and sharp descriptions on how to grow and care for house plants.

"I thought people my own age or schoolteachers might be interested in house plants. The young people were an unexpected surprise," she says, smiling broadly.

"My aim is to reassure those people living in apartments who have no gardens, and those people who might be afraid of plants, that they too can enjoy plants year round.

"Caring for plants gives a person a tremendous amount of relaxation, a sense of protectiveness, moments of triumph. Plants brush away loneliness. They need someone, you know.

"I think the young viewers feel this. They are fed up with fake. They are not in the market for plastics and artificials. It's a choice of how we live and one mustn't settle for the imitation, especially when it comes to plants," she says vigorously.

"I have discovered people learn more on TV by osmosis and example. Talking about plant cultivation is the only way. Books don't show you the failures that every gardener has."

Miss Cruso is not averse to talking about her failures in experimental gardening. "All I can do is show how things have succeeded for me. Of course, I show my failures. Nothing inspires confidence more than a supposedly expert gardener who has failures," she says with Britishly bright humor.

She recalls the time she was giving laborious details on how to get rid of bugs on plants. She explained that you dip the plant in soapy water. She demonstrated the procedure but forgot to wash the soap off the plant. The demonstration plant died 24 hours later.

Miss Cruso and her husband, Hugh Hencken, came to the United States in 1935 and established themselves in a Beacon Street (Boston) apartment that was virtually without sun.

"It was an intolerable winter. I was used to having some sign of spring and I was dreadfully homesick for plants. I decided I must have some growing plants to assuage the loneliness.

FLOWER POWER

"It was the bloody heat inside," she says. "I gradually learned what would and wouldn't grow under American apartment conditions. This is what I try to pass along to the amateur enthusiast. Gardening isn't an exact science, you know. I don't try to tell people what to do. There are many different ways of raising house plants. No one can grow everything in the world. My guests fill in the gaps on things I don't know about or cannot do. I adore a guest who does something differently than I," she says.

A few Cruso tips on plants:

"An occasional highhanded plunge into the bathtub will do wonders for a plant. Remember not to feed them until they show signs of life. As days become longer, your plants will start to perk up. Just like people.

"A sharpened chopstick is the best tool to dig away top soil to expose

'knobby knees' (heavy surface roots).

"Plants are very persistent. You can cut, bruise, abuse them and they'll hold on to any bit of earth for dear life. What's more, they'll thrive under such treatment and only ask to be sliced up again."

It is evident that Miss Cruso takes a homey, rather pragmatic approach to her indoor horticulture. It is the same with her television appearances. Much like the cook's cook, Julia Child, she has a humorous, no-nonsense attitude. She is spontaneous, personable and, above all, knowledgeable. Although she refers to herself as "plodding" and "factual" (she once lectured for the London Museum) she is delightfully herself, tolerably unself-conscious, and agreeably unbothered by her exposure. With one exception: "The only thing I object to about my television appearances is my filthy nails. You can't be a gardener without filthy nails, but they look perfectly dreadful in color." Well, that's show biz.

A TALK-SHOW HOST TALKS OFF CAMERA

Merv Griffin's conversation reveals something of what goes on underneath the ice-cream exterior

By Joe McGinniss

Merv Griffin's stomach was pushing just a little too hard against the front of the black turtle-neck he was wearing. His hair, contour-cut, with touches of gray, was shaggy on the back of his neck. It was 10 o'clock Monday morning; a new week, and, according to his wife, a new diet.

"Proteins and liquid," Merv Griffin's wife said.

The city sun shone into the parlor of their apartment on Central Park West. Merv Griffin, who eats breakfast in bed every morning, had come to the parlor for more coffee. The ceiling's gold fringe sparkled. His wife had painted that herself. The book shelves were full, predictable: Thornton Wilder, McLuhan, Louis Nizer.

"You drink eight glasses of water a day and don't eat any lunch and if you feel faint you can have one lemon drop at 3 o'clock in the afternoon."

Merv Griffin made a face.

"One lemon drop?"

"One lemon drop."

He lit a cigaret, sipped hot coffee, smelled its steam. Monday morning. This one worse than most, after the Gridiron Club banquet in Washington. Merv Griffin's first experience with the Gridiron Club.

"What parties! They don't even have parties like that in New York." He paused, searching for the meaning of the weekend: "It was good to get out of town, though. People are more cheerful down there."

"You know," he said, leaning forward in his chair, his voice stepping up a notch, "almost the entire power structure of the Nation was there. Right in that one room."

"I sat between Marvin Watson, the Presidential assistant, and that doctor, what's his name, the one who quit the Administration? Goddard. Dr. Goddard. Gosh, what a brilliant guy."

And at one point, Merv Griffin, this band singer, this daytime guy who used to be called Marv Griffith by a lot of people because the impression he made was not strong enough to make them remember his name right, this same Merv Griffin was introduced to a very distinguished-looking man whose name he did not quite catch. But the man said how much he and his wife both enjoyed Merv Griffin's show and how they watched it every chance they got, and afterward Merv Griffin found out who it was, and do you know who it turned out to be? The editor of the New York Times.

Well, at least the executive editor. Turner Catling.

Turner Catling?

"Yes, Turner, ah . . ."

"Catledge."

"Catledge. That's it. Turner Catledge. But can you image that?"

Then it was time to go. He stood, handed two garment bags to Al Fisher, his public relations man, and carefully avoided a large glass jar that had been placed next to the garment bags in a foyer.

"Wait honey. You forgot the jar."

"What do I want the jar for?"

"For your water. It holds exactly eight glasses. If you fill it up and finish it you'll be sure to get enough."

"Don't worry, I'll drink the water. But I don't need that jar."

"Well, all right. If you're sure you'll drink it. Al, be sure he drinks enough."

And Merv Griffin walks down to the street, where Cyril, the chauffeur, is waiting with the car. It is a Cadillac, with plates that say MEG. Merv Griffin puts on a pair of sunglasses and gets in. The car pulls into the light midmorning traffic of the Upper West Side, and Merv Griffin, television star, singer, owner of four radio stations, a quiz show, a music publishing company and a New Jersey farm, has begun another day; another week, in a life in which there are no longer any valleys, only peaks.

* * *

Not all of him is like a little boy. Only the part that shows. There is a crispness, a good clear sharpness beneath the ice-cream surface, yet it is the nature of his new life, the life of the variety show host, not to let anything with jagged edges through.

"Look, I get guests on the show → who I want to punch in the nose. But I don't let it show. At least I try not to. I think it's bad to show your audience too much."

So, to observe the public Merv Griffin is to see warmth, kindness, simplicity, enthusiasm, a tendency to hero-worship, and not much else.

In the morning, in his East Side office ("This is where we get the ideas. This is where we fight"), he sits, backward, on a chair, following with great intensity a run-through of a new quiz game he would like to put on the air. He already owns Jeopardy ("Every bit as good a show as College Bowl"), and now he is trying to put a new one together.

The run-through ends. A fat housewife from New Jersey loses after having been ahead all the way. "Hey, that's not fair," she says.

"Damn, it's a good game. Wow!" Merv Griffin says. Excited, he congratulates his staff, suggests a few improvements, and leaves.

Cyril pulls the car to the curb in front of the West Side studio where The Merv Griffin Show is taped.

"Hey! This should be a thrill for you. There's David Merrick."

He jumps out, runs up, shakes hands: "Hi, Mr. Merrick . . ."

" . . . Keep up the ratings."

"I'll try, Mr. Merrick."

Then, inside, he says, "That's the real kingpin."

Ordinarily, it is not until 5 o'clock that Merv Griffin begins serious work for The Merv Griffin Show, which is taped between 6:30 and 8. He starts with the bookers' meeting. The bookers, who are the people who get the guests, come in and tell him about those he will have on that night.

On this Monday it is Art Linkletter, Abbe Lane, Brook Benton, Robert Merrill and a couple of comedians.

"What's Linkletter going to do?" one of the bookers asks, skeptical.

"Don't you worry about Linkletter," says Bob Shanks, the producer.

"He's solid. You can always count on Linkletter for a good eight minutes."

Then someone whispers to Shanks: "Abbe Lane is downstairs and says she doesn't know what to sing. She won't rehearse. Shall we tell her to take a hike?"

"No, no," says Shanks, trying to spare Merv Griffin all but the most crucial decisions, "we can work something out."

Unfortunately, that night, no one quite worked anything out. The carefully contrived opening, in which Shanks and Fisher, sudden skills, sit in the front row faking laughs and cheers and applause in an attempt to stir the audience, fell flat. Abbe Lane appeared but did not sing.

Then Linkletter, who, it turned out, was around only to sell a new Art Linkletter game. Oozing malted milk, he reached in front of Merv Griffin and held the game up before the cameras. Then, pushing hard, he took the cover off and explained how it was played. Finally, he went into a speech which sounded as if it were about the American flag or God, and ended, incredibly, with: "I really think a good game is the best single thing you can have because if you get a good game that appeals to the whole family it goes on forever."

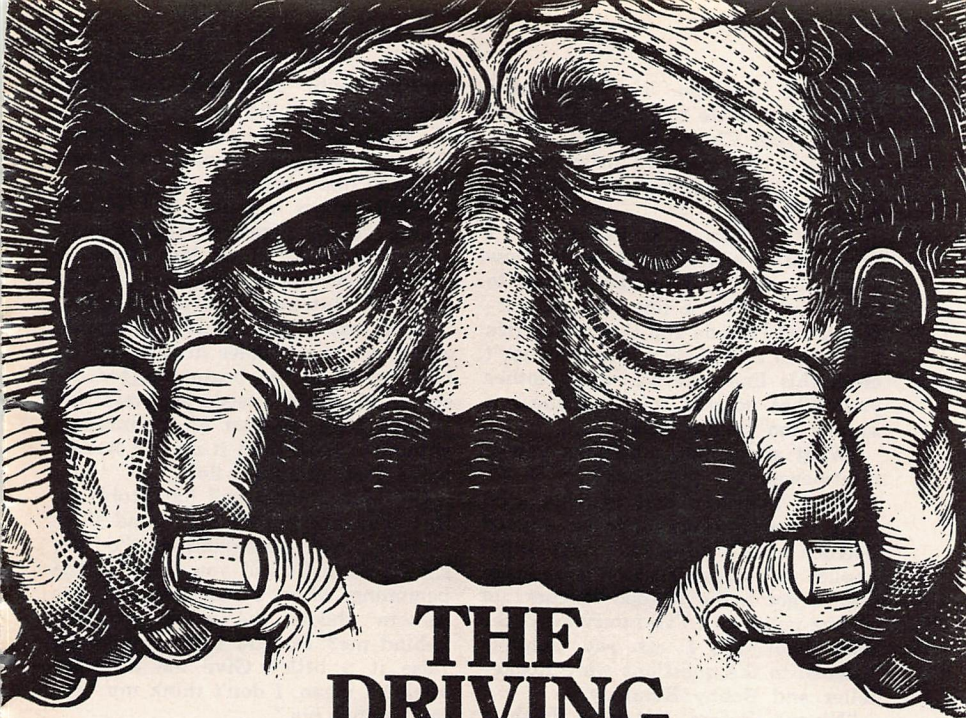

Merv Griffin sat very still in his chair.

"A mediocre show," he said when it was over, "but not a real bomb. Some of them are real bombs."

It is only at odd moments that you get to see more. At lunch in Sardi's, for instance, where he is cheating on his diet with a lean, rare steak and Fresca. The talk has turned to politics and politicians. Merv Griffin voted for Richard Nixon in 1960 and Lyndon Johnson in 1964 but in his office all you see are Kennedy books, the whole string: Sorensen's, Salinger's, Evelyn Lincoln's and, above them, an autographed picture of Jack. →

THE DRIVING DROWSIES

NODOZ ANNOUNCES A CHEWABLE WAY TO FIGHT THEM.

Even when you're rested the monotony of driving can give you the driving drowsies. New NoDoz® Action Aids* fight the driving drowsies — and you don't need water to take them.

You just pull over and chew a couple. They taste good. They contain the strongest stimulant you can buy without a prescription. And they're not habit forming.

Next time you get the driving drowsies, chew two for the road.

WHEN DRIVING MONOTONY STRIKES, NO CAR SHOULD BE WITHOUT THEM.

Lyndon Johnson is represented only by the little red-covered "Quotations from Chairman LBJ."

Merv Griffin traced a little pattern on the Sardi's tablecloth with his finger.

"I think Vietnam is awful . . . I think it's terrible. But I don't know what we can do. What I'd like us to do is just draw a line around ourselves and Canada and South America and say to the whole world, just don't cross this line and we won't bother you. What do you think? I guess it sounds too simple, huh?"

"What about the politicians you've interviewed on the show?"

"Well, they say that to be a good interviewer you've got to be a good listener and I think the same thing applies to a guest. To be a good guest you've got to be a good listener; of all the politicians I've interviewed the only two who I can say actually listened to the questions were Rockefeller and Bobby Kennedy.

"Nixon? Before I'd even finish a question, I could hear his mental filing cabinet click and a drawer slide open and a folder come out with the answer. Old darting-eye Dick. He looks here, he looks there, he looks here, but he never looks you in the eye.

"Hubert Humphrey they want me to have on and we're trying to get him but I'm not very enthusiastic about it because I honestly can't think of a single question I'd like to ask him."

He paused, thinking of a way to summarize his dissatisfaction.

"What we need in this country now," he said, "is someone like DeGaulle. Someone to give us pride in ourselves."

He was standing in his dressing room, in jockey shorts, one night later, changing after the show. It had been a much better show. Chuck Percy ("I don't know about him. He's still so new that he answers every question with a speech, but there might be something there. I was sort of impressed"), Benny Goodman, Xavier Cugat and funnier comedians than the night before.

"Well, this is how it goes," he was saying. "Some nights are better than others. It took me a long time to realize that not every show would be great. But now I'm relaxed about it. You just do your best all the time and don't punch holes in the wall on bad nights. In the beginning, for instance, I really used to press for laughs. Now we can go 18 minutes without a laugh and it doesn't bother me. I just let things flow."

Oh, Merv Griffin still has problems. But they are mostly of a kind like:

"Bob, I went home and watched the show last night and you know, in the beginning when I run out and the camera shoots the audience from behind me? Do you think you could raise it a little? Give me a better angle? I mean, I don't think my bottom is that big."

And it is all done mildly. His whole life. Bright, busy, simple, cheerful and mild. You wait a long time for what you want and then when you get it you just sort of click latches and lock everything into place.

You work a lot and smile a lot and if you are, in your guts, an exceptionally decent person, then you are nice to everyone you meet and you meet everyone you're asked to.

And when the show is over you walk out onto 47th Street, into the bright, electric night, with the new Gore Vidal play across the street, and Cyril waiting to take you home. But there is a crowd waiting and you sign your name for everyone and make pleasant little remarks and the people see that you really are a good, warm person, just the way you seem on the show, and they walk away happy because for once, maybe for the only time, someone they admired from a distance did not turn ugly up close. # TV Teletype: Hollywood

JOSEPH FINNIGAN REPORTS:

GOWER CHAMPION, who got his start in television dancing with wife MARGE on the old Your Show of Shows, will produce the 41st annual Academy Awards program next year. The show, to be seen on ABC-TV Monday, April 14, will move from Santa Monica to the new Los Angeles Music Center . . . Paramount TV is developing a new series called Holly Golightly, based on TRUMAN CAPOTE's "Breakfast at Tiffany's."

ANN-MARGRET, who made her TV debut on The Jack Benny Show in 1961, has JACK as a guest in her December special . . . Another December special will be a Christmas show starring BING CROSBY . . . And GEORGE HAMILTON will be on MITZI GAYNOR's October special.

Of special interest to TV fans in Seattle; Portland, Ore.; Oakland, Cal.; Cleveland; New York; Newport, R.I.; Denver; Los Angeles; Columbus, Ohio; Columbia, Md.; and Pittsburgh will be personal appearances in those cities this month by TOM and DICK SMOTHERS, accompanied by Presidential aspirant PAT PAULSEN and singer JOHN HARTFORD . . . Also traveling are the GOLDDIGGERS, whom DEAN MARTIN has been presenting this summer . . . Meanwhile, boss DINO has been signed to play an airline captain in the motion picture "Airport" . . . BRIAN KEITH is bicycling between Family Affair and the movie he has been making, "Gaily, Gaily."

While the TV stars make movies, the old movie stars turn to TV--SYLVIA SIDNEY in an episode of My Three Sons and RUTH ROMAN in The Name of the Game . . . Ex-Peyton Placer MIA FARROW is breaking records in the movie "Rosemary's Baby" . . . Logical casting: HILO HATTIE in an episode of Hawaii Five-0 . . . Not-so-logical casting: Famed criminal lawyer MELVIN BELLI as a malevolent character in Star Trek.

Malevolent characters seem to loom large in The Name of the Game--comedian JACK CARTER fingering the Maffia in "Witness" and NINA FOCH aiding the Maffia in "Collectors' Edition," while the Maffia's nemesis, The FBI, is being seen in 36 countries and six languages . . . It sounds like in-breeding, but LUCILLE BALL, whose company originated Mission: Impossible, has made an episode called "Lucy's Impossible Mission" . . . DENNIS WEAVER's wife and two of his three sons will be with him in a Gentle Ben segment.

New castings in old shows: JIMMY DEAN in a continuing role in Daniel Boone, CLIFF ARQUETTE (Charley Weaver) in The Jonathan Winters Show, JOAN ANDERSON of The Doctors with another doctor in Daktari, and REGIS TOOMEY Petticoat Junction . . . What are the former series stars doing? ADAM WEST (Batman) in a segment of Big Valley, RICK JASON (Combat!) and MARIETTE HARTLEY (The Hero) in an episode of the new program, The Outsider, starring DARREN MCGAVIN, who hasn't been around for a while himself.

More fine tobacco

Longer filter, too

Pall Mall gives you more tobacco for more flavor. A longer filter for a milder taste. You make out better at both ends—better than with any other cigarette.
